

The Chronicle

terest and listing the facilities in the Marietta area will be sent to EAIA members by Marietta's Tourist and Convention Bureau. Members will make their own reservations for overnight accommodations.

Made by Benjamin Platt, New Milford, Connecticut. Platt was a worker in gold, silver, and brass. Besides surveying instruments he also made clocks. Platt moved his residence several times; this particular compass was probably made about 1802 when he lived in New Milford.

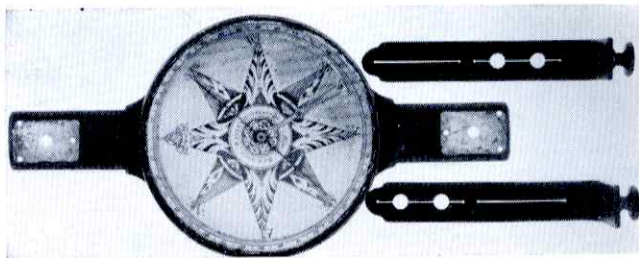

Made by Augustus Platt, Columbus, Ohio. Platt, and his father, Benjamin, also a well-known instrument maker, moved to Columbus about 1817 where he died in 1886. Benjamin died in 1833, so the above transit was probably made between that date and 1843 when the company was known as "Platt and Son" (Augustus' son William).

For the information and pleasure of the members as they travel to and from the Convention, The Ohio Historical Society will provide Ohio Landmarks and a listing of State Memorials and Museums. Members will recall one of the Society's famous sites, Adena in Chillicothe, where dinner was served to them in October, 1956, when EAIA met in Columbus.

A special tour to the Fenton Glass Co. at Williams-town, W. Virginia, is scheduled on your program for Friday afternoon.

Sponsors of this meeting are: The Ohio Historical Society, Muskingum County Historical Society, Marietta Area Chamber of Commerce and Washington County Historical Society.

Made by Benjamin Rittenhouse, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Rittenhouse held several positions for the State of Pennsylvania. In 1796 he made a surveyor's chain by order of Congress which has remained the standard measure to this day. This compass was made in 1787.

Mr. Brooks, Master gunsmith demonstrating his craft.
